WHAT A LEAF DOES.—A leaf, says the "American Botanist and Botanist," pumps water from the ground through thousands of tubes in the stem of the tree, and sends it to the atmosphere in the form of unseen mist, to be condensed and fall in showers—the very water that, were it not for the leaf, would sink into the earth and find its way, perchance, through subterranean channels to the sea.
And thus it is that, we see it works to give us the "early and the latter rain." It works to send the little rills and streams, like lines of silver, down the mountain and across the plain. It works to pour down the larger brooks which turn the wheels that energize the machinery which gives employment to millions—commerce stimulated, wealth accumulated and intelligence disseminated through the agency of this wealth. The leaf does it all.

It has been demonstrated that every square inch of leaf lifts 3,500 of an ounce every 24 hours. Now, a large forest tree has about five acres of foliage, or 6,272,640 square inches. This being multiplied by 3,500 (the amount pumped by every inch), gives us the result—2,352 ounces, or 1,196 quarts or 294 gallons or eight barrels in twenty-four hours. An acre of grass, or clover, or grain, would yield about the same result.

The leaf is a worker, too, in another field of labor, where we seldom look—where it works for the good of man in a most wonderful manner. It carries immense quantities of electricity from the earth to the clouds, and from the clouds to the earth. Rather dangerous way of transporting lightning, but it is particularly fitted for this work. Did you ever see a leaf cut to its edges? It is always pointed, and these points, whether they be large or small, are just fitted to handle this dangerous agent. These tiny fingers seize upon and carry it away with ease and wonderful dispatch. There must be no delay; it is "time freight." True, some times it gathers up more than the trunk can carry, and in the attempt to crowd and pack the baggage the trunk gets terribly shattered, and we say that lightning struck the tree. But this time it was over worked.

MINOR WORKS OF ART.—It is singular how important to the world are many of the little things we pass by unnoticed. A young English manufacturer was once asked by a German firm to take charge of the glass eyes manufactured exclusively by them for dolls. He was about to decline the commission as likely to give more trouble than it was worth, when he was shown by the foreign firm that the trade in glass eyes amounted to some twenty thousand dollars annually. The man who invents a new toy that becomes popular, makes a rapid fortune, though the mechanism may be of the slightest and cheapest; the man who writes a taking song, however foolish it may be, is certain also of his five or ten thousand dollars. From children to men we must be amused, and we are willing to pay the price. Look at the little ivory billiard balls: they are very simple, perfectly round; ah! there's the defect. Any one who remedies it can sit down at his ease and have money poured into his pocket. Balls made of ivory, even when they are quite new are not of the same density throughout, and consequently do not run perfectly true. Making them of glass and steel has been tried, but without success. Colender, the billiard ball manufacturer, has a standing offer of $10,000 unclaimed for ten years, to any one who invents a proper substitute for the present billiard ball. The nearest approach to the "genuine elephant," thus far is the composition balls made of compressed paper for a core, with an outer coating of collodion and other materials. Ivory shucks exactly the same as wood, i. e. with the grain, and the knowledge of this fact led to the abolishing of all ivory scales formerly used in the British Survey offices. Various means have been proposed to season the ivory in addition to that in general use—keeping in perforated boxes, or in netting—but the result is only "skin deep" seasoning. Mr. Colender had the first chemists in this country experimenting with various methods of seasoning the ivory used in making billiard balls, and without material success. Another plan is now on trial with indications of ultimate success; but the process is a trade secret.—Balt. Gazette.

A WOULD-BE MONARCH'S ABODE.—The Count of Chambray, with an income of £20,000, is content to inhabit the ground floor of Frohford Castle, his residence. His reception room is plain. The furniture represents the style of the latter part of the last century, the proprietor having an extreme dislike of what he calls "gewgaws." The prospect from the windows is splendid, embracing a range of hills thickly wooded with fir trees. His closet contains a large variety of heavy walking-sticks, their owner being lame, and an equally varied assortment of porting implements, the Count having inherited from his grandfather, Charles X, who was the crack shot of his time, a decided taste for sporting. His favorite seat is a easy chair, made entirely from gigantic stag-horn and upholstered with stag skins. His father, the Duke of Berri, was very corpulent, and the Count inherits the paternal obesity. His stature is less than five feet nine inches, and his age is fifty-three. He speaks a good deal of Versailles, and thinks that the bed of Louis XIV is ready for him to sleep in. His wife, three years his senior, is more cautious and bolder than her husband, and is regarded as his superior in intelligence and force of character.

A PERMANENT EARTHQUAKE.—The country around Lake Chelan, in Washington territory, has an earthquake which has apparently come to stay. There is almost daily a repetition of slight shocks. In some places the earth has sunk, in other places lakes have formed where there was no sign formerly of water, and along the banks of the Columbia river large masses of rocks have become detached from the banks and tumbled into the river, causing it to cut new channels. The seat of the earthquake seems to be just below the lake and fifteen or twenty miles from the Columbia. The Indians say the noise resembles thunder and is of almost daily occurrence, and that at one time there was an issue of salt water from a fissure in the earth that caused the ground knee deep, which too, was charged with a most horrid smell. The Indians are very much scared about the phenomenon—so badly frightened, in fact, that they call it halluvian chuk.
